KEEP YOUR MEAT FRESH WITH THE OUTFITTER 125 BY CANYON COOLERS®

Hunters Need Not Worry About Spoilage With This High Performance Cooler

With hunting season underway, it's time for outdoorsmen to take inventory of their coolers. Not only is ample space required to store meat harvested on multi-day excursions, but ice retention and pack-ability should be considered, as well. Canyon Coolers contemplated all of the above, and designed the Outfitter 125 specifically to tackle all these concerns.

There is nothing more heartbreaking than to arrive home from a hunting trip to find your hard-earned venison spoiled because of poorly insulated coolers. This will never happen with the Canyon Outfitter 125. This one-piece, roto-molded cooler boasts ice-retention of seven to 20 days thanks to the HUNTX foam that is pressure injected into the walls, floor and lid. Canyon didn't skim on the insulation thickness either, with the front wall measuring 2.1 inches thick; the back wall featuring 1.75 inches of thickness; the sidewalls landing between 1.8 and 2.75 inches; the lid with 2.25 inches of insulation; and the floor 1.5 to 2 inches of foam. In addition, the Outfitter 125 features an airtight seal so warm air cannot enter unless the lid is opened.

The size of the Outfitter 125, which actually holds 126 quarts, will easily store several whitetail deer or a deboned elk. Although it is a large cooler (exterior dimensions are 35 inches long by 20.25 inches wide by 20.25 inches tall), the cooler is designed to pack tightly in a truck bed with other gear. The recessed EZCAM latches and durable rope handles eliminate awkward and wasted space. This cooler also comes standard with tie-down points and is certified IGBC Bear Resistant.

The features of the Outfitter 125 don't stop there. The cooler features rubber non-skid feet on the White Marble models, and truck-bed friendly skid plates on the Sandstone color. Canyon's No-Lose drain plug comes standard, as well. And for those hunters who want to organize and pack food in to the campsite, the interior is designed to hold three baskets, so you can keep drinks and food perfectly organized. Plus, like all other Canyon coolers, the Outfitter 125 comes with a lifetime warranty, not that you'll ever need it.

Canyon Coolers manufactures ridiculously cold, seriously tough coolers to keep food and beverages cold for not just days, but weeks. Ultra-tough in design from the drain plugs, latches, and handles these coolers are designed to take a beating from the hot sun in stride. Canyon Coolers are used by hunters, anglers, rafters, outdoor enthusiasts — and anyone else whose adventures are fueled by seriously cold refreshments.
