HIT THE FLYWAYS WITH DICKINSON ARMS' 212 CAMO SERIES SHOTGUNS

Reliable, Inertia-Driven 12-Gauge Shotguns are Ready for the Duck Blind

Dickinson Arms, a world leader in high-quality firearms, has a solid reputation for bringing reliable, value-packed shotguns to the market, and the 212 series is no exception. This inertia-driven, semi-automatic 12-gauge is perfect for waterfowl hunting wherever the migration takes you.

Any waterfowler will tell you that a true duck-hunting shotgun must take a beating and work every time you pull the trigger, regardless of the conditions. Dickinson designed the 212 using an inertia system with a rotating lock head and the fewest moving parts possible. The action works with every type of load, from light field loads, up through the heaviest magnum loads, and with any type of waterfowl shot.

Another key to a true waterfowl hunting shotgun is balance. The 212 is supremely balanced and the weight is spread evenly throughout the entire shotgun, making it swing like a natural extension of your body. Fitting the 212 is easy as well, with an adjustable comb buttstock that helps you align your line of sight with the raised rib and bead front sight.

The Dickinson 212 camo shotguns are available in your choice of Mossy Oak Shadowgrass®, or Mossy Oak Duck Blind® camo patterns. There are three barrel length options: 26-, 28-, and 30-inches. The barrels come with interchangeable chokes for patterning your shot. Pick the model that fits your needs best and get ready. The birds are dropping in and it's time to take 'em!
