The new 12-Gauge Cleaning Kit is designed to be portable, allowing you to clean up your shotgun at home, on the road, or in the field.

Everyone knows the importance of gun oil. Every firearm has some amount of moving parts and metal-on-metal contact requires oil. Think of your truck's engine. You wouldn't drive it without oil in the motor, why put your firearm through the stress? That's why Dickinson Arms developed their new nanoparticle gun oil that is specifically designed to penetrate deeply at the molecular level and provide a long-lasting barrier for both friction and moisture. The new Dickinson Gun Oil comes in convenient spray cans with flip-up straws attached so you don't lose them. The straws let you get into the small, tight spots in your firearm to spray in the oil without making a mess. Dickinson's gun oil is designed to clean and protect your firearm. Available in two convenient sizes.

The other thing about firearms is that they need to be cleaned after you have your fun hunting or at the range. A good cleaning kit is a must, and Dickinson has a compact kit for 12-gauge shotguns that makes it easy to stay clean at home, on the road, or in the field. It includes stainless steel rods and a handle, a bore brush, a cotton mop, a spring brush, patches, a double-end brush, a muzzle guard, and a brass patch holder. When you add in some Dickinson's Gun Oil, you've got a potent cleaning kit that can have your shotgun operating at its best, no matter how dirty you get it.
